HEALTH KNOW-HOW HITTING THE ROAD

It's a long, confusing road for people living with Alzheimer's disease and similar forms of dementia. As the number of people affected rises in Saskatchewan, more help is on the way for patients and their families.

The Alzheimer Society of Saskatchewan will soon open four additional First Link program centres in Swift Current, North Battleford, Prince Albert and Weyburn to expand support for patients with that disease and with other forms of dementia.

"There are so many challenges with (the disease) — communications changes and daily living changes. What we help people to do is to understand those things," Joanne Bracken, CEO of the Alzheimer Society, said on Tuesday as the plan was announced in Regina.

The new centres — to be en explained.

The organization took on 500 new patients last year, on top of the 2,000 people it had been serving. In 2012, more than 4,000 new cases of dementia were confirmed in people aged 65 or older in Saskatchewan.

"I see patients every day with dementia, and they are crying out for more information. They want to know more; they want to know what's ahead," said Dr. Andrew Kirk, a Saskatoon neurologist. "It's a great program to help people along that journey."

The program expansion is coming through a funding increase to $400,000 a year from the Saskatchewan government, which has so far given $50,000 to the society annually since 2009.

More than 18,300 people in Saskatchewan have dementia, and the number keeps growing.

"The aging population is the cause of the rise of the numbers," Kirk said, adding that various forms of dementia affect a range of ages.

Wall pitches carbon capture technology

Premier Brad Wall says the province has game-changing carbon capture technology and he's trying to sell the idea to the world.

Wall spoke Tuesday at an annual carbon capture conference in Pittsburgh.

The premier says there was keen interest in a project at the Boundary Dam power station near Estevan.

The plan there is to capture up to 90 per cent of CO2 emissions.

Most of the CO2 captured from Boundary is to be used to push more oil out of the ground in what's called enhanced oil recovery.

Wall says Saskatchewan wants to sell the technology and some "large players" at the conference are interested.

Carbon capture involves gathering carbon dioxide from power plants and injecting it deep into porous rock formations so it doesn't add to greenhouse gas emissions.

Bloodsuckers ahead

Tick season off to late start in Sask.

Despite being delayed by a long winter and cool spring, Saskatchewan is entering its tick season, and experts say it's important to protect yourself against the blood-suckers.

Philip Curry, a zoonotics disease consultant with the provincial government, said a number of factors can affect tick abundance while numbers vary year to year. But after about six months of being buried under snow, they're out and looking for blood.

"There's been an abundant snow pack, so they would have been in the leaf litter and dead grass under the snow, probably surviving quite well," Curry said.

Tick season usually peaks from mid May into late June, and Curry said people will have plenty of run-ins with them during the long weekend.

Mayor Michael Fougere makes closing remarks at Regina's housing summit. METRO/JEFF MACKEY

New housing committee formed

Goal. The group will aim to bring vacancy in city up to 3% by 2017

JEFF
MACKEY

The city is hoping it has its foot in the door when it comes to finding housing solutions.

Tuesday was the second and final day of the Mayor's Housing Summit. The event, which examines issues surrounding housing, brought in speakers and stakeholders from across the country.

Regina Mayor Michael Fougere concluded the event

Quoted

"This is a way to keep this a priority on council to make sure we adapt and be nimble in the way we respond to housing conditions."

Mayor Michael Fougere

by announcing the creation of a permanent committee on housing. The committee would be dedicated to the city's goal of bringing its overall housing vacancy up to three per cent by 2017, from the current level of less than one per cent.

"This is a way to keep this a priority on council to make sure we adapt and be nimble in the way we respond to housing conditions," Fougere said after the summit. "It is the first step to really responding to some of the things we have heard about over the last couple days."

Though exact details regarding the committee's mandate or composition were not forthcoming, the province has been invited to join it and the Federation of Canadian Municipalities is also supportive of the initiative.

Also announced at the summit is a pending sale of nine lots and two former bus turnaround sites by the city of Regina to non-profit housing providers.

"We have a lot of lots around the city that are orphan lots," said Fougere. "We are walking the walk, we are trying to show that we are serious about doing this."

During the summit, innovation came to the fore when ideas like pocket suites — two-storey apartments with eight self-contained suites that look like single-family homes — and housing made from recycled shipping containers were discussed.

Other themes included sustainability in the non-profit housing sector, as well as human rights and housing.

Rural first responders get boost

Rural emergency responders in Saskatchewan are poised to get more hands-on training from STARS medical transport teams, following a bank's donation of a half-million dollars for the work.

RBC Royal Bank announced on Tuesday that it's donating $500,000 to the Shock Trauma Air Rescue Society (STARS) for development of a mobile education and training initiative for Saskatchewan and Manitoba.

"You can see the impact they have on the lives and the communities," David McKay, RBC Group's head of personal and commercial banking, said at a STARS hangar near Regina International Airport.

The money, he said, will be split equally between the STARS training programs in both provinces and go toward a mobile training unit — a sort of emergency response education centre on wheels.

"I think it will be based here in Regina, and available to all those communities," McKay explained while a STARS mobile unit from Calgary was at the hangar as an example.

"It's a unit used to travel into communities to train medical practitioners."

Raegan Gardner, a STARS flight nurse and clinical educator based in Regina, said the organization — which has helicopters for medical transports in Regina, Saskatoon and Winnipeg, as well as others in Alberta — has much to offer emergency medical crews in rural areas.

"We'll come out free of charge. We'll bring our trained facilitators and debriefers, and physicians when they're available. And we'll run multiple scenarios for them," Gardner explained.

"That might be trauma, it might be about cardiac and heart attack patients, maybe for farming accidents, or it could be for children who are in medical emergencies. It really depends on what the community is looking for."

Test drive ended in killing: Cops

Ontario man found — dead. Murder to be added to charges as more suspects sought

A 32-year-old father from Hamilton, Ont., who took two men for a test drive last week in a truck he posted for sale was killed that night, police allege, though it's a mystery why.

Tim Bosma's body — "burned beyond recognition" — was found in the Waterloo Region, about 50 kilometres from his home, police said on Tuesday.

A Toronto man is under arrest and was set to be charged on Wednesday with first-degree murder, Hamilton police Det. Sgt. Matt Kavanagh said. Investigators were looking for at least two other suspects.

Dellen Millard, 27, was arrested on Friday and is already charged with forcible confinement and theft over $5,000. His lawyer has said he will dispute the charges.

Bosma, described as a church-going family man not

Police said they were also looking for at least one more person, as video evidence shows another vehicle following Bosma's pickup truck when he left on the test drive, Kavanagh said. Police weren't able to make out the model from the footage, only that it is an "SUV-type vehicle."

Psychiatrist says she had no idea drugs were forced on teen

A psychiatrist teared up on Tuesday as she testified about watching video of prison staff injecting a troubled inmate over her objections.

Dr. Michelle Roy told the Ashley Smith inquest that she was dismayed to discover only recently a "huge" discrepancy between what a nurse described by phone and reality.

The inquest has seen Smith was not, in fact, out of control at the prison in Joliette, Que., when Roy prescribed a tranquillizer for Smith over the phone.

Prescribing by phone was a normal practice that relied on accurate information, Roy said.

In July 2007, a nurse at Joliette Institution for Women called Roy, saying that the teen, who had a propensity to self-harm, was apparently in a severely agitated state.

"She had objects in her vagina. She was bleeding. There was a possibility of electrocution," Roy testified.

Roy advised the nurse to put Smith in restraints, prescribed a powerful tranquilizer and recommended an exam at the general hospital.

"My expectation when I gave those orders was ... that this patient must be put on restraints immediately, and then offer her medication," Roy said.

Various nurses would call to say Smith was still extremely agitated — something not reflected in the prison video.

Over a 10-hour period, the psychiatrist ended up prescribing five sets of injections, believing Smith was accepting them voluntarily.

Roy said the only time she prescribed medicating Smith involuntarily was for a transfer flight, but even then only if the inmate was out of control. THE CANADIAN PRESS

Hadfield comes back to Earth as a star on the rise

A Canadian Odyssey.

What's next for our national singing spaceman? Marc Garneau says the sky's the limit

What's next for Chris Hadfield, the Canadian supernova who made space sexy again?

Hadfield landed safely back on Earth Monday after five months at the International Space Station, tweeting, playing his guitar and explaining the mysteries of space by video.

Marc Garneau, who in 2000 was Canada's first astronaut to visit the space station, has some ideas. He says he wouldn't be surprised to see Hadfield follow his path into politics. Some have even suggested to him that Hadfield could become prime minister tomorrow if

"He's certainly a very popular figure," Garneau told Torstar News Service. "I've had numerous people say this to me. He has superstar status. I think he has the

It is more likely that Hadfield will first be courted by a number of organizations with requests for personal appearances, speaking engagements and even book offers.

Garneau expects that Parliament will fete Hadfield at some point this year.

And he doesn't expect Hadfield's star to dim any time soon.

Hadfield appears to be in a happy place with both feet on the ground, tweeting upon landing that he is happy to be back.

"Safely home — back on Earth, happily readapting to the heavy pull of gravity. Wonderful to smell and feel Spring."

Senate. Brazeau says he'll fight order to pay back $35,000

Patrick Brazeau says he broke no rules when he claimed almost $35,000 in a Senate housing allowance and he's exploring all options to overturn an order to pay the money back.

Brazeau, a one-time Conservative senator who now sits as an independent, was one of three senators ordered by the Senate's internal economy committee last week to repay inappropriately claimed housing allowances.

Brazeau notes that the committee ordered reimbursement despite the conclusion of independent auditor Deloitte that the Senate rules regarding primary and secondary residences are unclear.

Because of that lack of clarity, Deloitte couldn't conclude whether Brazeau, Conservative Sen. Mike Duffy or Liberal Mac Harb had violated the rules in claiming that their primary residences were outside the national capital region.

Sen. Patrick Brazeau
THE CANADIAN PRESS

Brazeau says he'll seek greater clarification of the committee's decision and try to have the ruling reversed.

Harb has already indicated he'll fight his repayment order in court; in March, Duffy voluntarily repaid just over $90,000 in housing allowances and related living expenses claims.

BlackBerry gambles on BBM growth

Orlando, Fla. Company makes its messaging service available on iOS, Android devices

BlackBerry CEO Thorsten Heins speaks at Tuesday's BlackBerry Live conference in Orlando, Fla. THE ASSOCIATED PRESS

BlackBerry came out swinging on Tuesday with a slate of announcements that included an expansion of its popular BlackBerry Messenger service to its competitors' devices and a new smartphone aimed at emerging markets.

Chief executive Thorsten Heins said the time was right for BBM, a key feature of BlackBerry smartphones, to be available on iPhones, iPads and Google Android devices as he kicked off the company's three-day BlackBerry Live conference.

"BBM actually was a key element of (why) people were going to BlackBerry," he said after the unveiling of the smartphone maker's latest plans.

"We feel this platform and its product are standing on its own legs. That is the time to release BBM to another level and really let BBM flourish on its own."

The move is a gamble for the company, which has many loyal users who have stuck with their BlackBerry devices just to keep access to BBM. But the messaging service has run into competition from other similar options like WhatsApp and Waterloo, Ont.-based Kik Messenger.

The BlackBerry Q5, which was announced Tuesday, will sport a physical keyboard and a 3.1-inch screen. It will be available in several colours including red, black, white and pink in selected markets in Europe, the Middle East, Africa, Asia and Latin America starting in July. THE CANADIAN PRESS

TOO MUCH DINERO FOR GELATO

Beware the tourist trap. It can snag your wallet and never let it go.

In the tourist trap, it's always high season. Take the story of the four British tourists who stopped for an ice cream near Rome's Spanish Steps recently and paid the equivalent of $84 Canadian.

This should be the craziest thing you've ever heard, except it isn't.

Once paid 25 euros for a cup of coffee on the Champs-Élysées, le grand boulevard de Paris, and certainly le plus cher boulevard de Paris. That's about 33 bucks. It was a café au lait, after all. The waiter was outraged that I refused to leave a tip.

"Work it out," I said, "with the extortionist who owns this place," and stalked off.

I'm sure each of us has a horror story to share. As there are

JUST SAYIN'

Paul Sullivan

metronews.ca

tourist traps right here in our own backyard, you don't have to go very far to get fleeced.

Every tourist trap has one thing in common. It's a must-see. You know what you're getting into, but who can resist Venice or Harrods or the pyramids along the Nile or any of the other legendary places that are part of the iconography of our lives?

"I went to Paris and didn't bother with the Champs-Élysées." I don't think so. Just try not to spend any money, which is almost impossible. Breathing the air costs beaucoup de euros.

Meanwhile, back at the world's most expensive ice cream parlour, the proprietors are defending the price, which comes to about $21 a dish. "That's about half a kilo of gelato," a manager who refused to be identified told an inquiring U.K. reporter. Well, all right then, what's the fuss?

Thankfully, the mayor of Rome was embarrassed and offered a personal tour of his city to the tourists, should they ever recover from the shock to their fiscal systems. You can just imagine: "Here's where I buy MY gelato..."

I guess you could argue that this, in the ancient language of Rome, is a case of caveat emptor. Nobody made those people buy the ice cream, and, in fact, the prices were posted — in mouse type. But tourism is hard work, and requires refreshment. And there's something nasty about squeezing the euros out of people who travelled halfway across the world just to visit.

While the mayor of Rome has the good sense to be embarrassed on his city's behalf, so far, I have yet to hear back from the mayor of Paris on the price of a cup of coffee.

Nor, I should add, has he apologized for the cost of the crepe smeared with a dollop of Nutella purchased atop the Eiffel Tower. You think he'd learn.

Interview. Robert Kyncl, YouTube's global head of content, reveals the tools needed to propel you to celebrity status

scene@metronews.ca

Even though he holds the keys to the future of entertainment, Robert Kyncl is a remarkably easygoing man. As global head of content at YouTube, Kyncl has successfully steered the company from being a depository for cat videos to a position as a media powerhouse.

What will entertainment's future look like? Metro met Kyncl, a former Czech top athlete with a ready laugh, for an exclusive interview at YouTube's Los Angeles office.

Is TV as a device dead?

No, but there are many other devices, what I call "work machines" — computers, phones, tablets, which are Wi-Fi-enabled and transmit video. Because of this, suddenly we've uncovered a lot of other consumption patterns and demand from consumers for content that doesn't fit the same format as the TV set.

Those changing habits, with viewers spending more time on homemade content, are also blurring the lines between consumer and producer. What does that mean for entertainment's future? It just means that there are many more creators than in the past. In the past, the entire television industry was based on a closed system: a telecommunications company delivering the content to you into a device that was sitting in your living room. Today it's an open system, where anyone can deliver content to a device, and of course you can still view it on your TV set as well.

How will all of this change our daily lives?

Look at mobile media consumption. For us at YouTube, in the past two years it has gone from six per cent of all of our consumption to 30 per cent. In some countries, like South Korea and Saudi Arabia, it's more than 50 per cent. Mobile devices are becoming the first screen instead of the second screen.

Is that good or bad?

I think it's a good thing. People used to sit around the TV and more or less be quiet.

Today people are sharing — that means commenting and having conversations. People start these conversations in text form, but they'll very quickly move over to a live form. Of course, everything has to be in moderation. If everything you do all day is watch YouTube on your smartphone it's not very good.

How much YouTube do you watch everyday?

About half an hour. A couple of years ago it was less than five minutes a day.

What's the key ingredient to success in new media?

On the Internet, you can go directly to the consumer, but you have to do the other parts yourself: analyzing trends and your consumers and quantifying them.

This means that you have to be good in math. Your ability to, for example, expand your YouTube channel will rely on your ability to spot and measure trends with data. Creativity and analytical skills are a phenomenal mix.

So teenagers should brush up on their math?

That's what I tell my daughters every day. And science. And learn how to code!

What will be YouTube's hit shows of the future?

It's difficult to predict. There are shows on YouTube today that are getting audiences larger than shows on TV. But the mainstream audience doesn't know about it, which is why most people don't know about it. We just haven't told the world about it. But we're working on it.

This is Metro's final installment in the series looking at the future of television.

Thieves hit concert venue after Bieber show

Justin Bieber's tour is on hiatus until he hits San Diego next month, but the scandal-plagued international leg wouldn't be complete without one more hitch: After Bieber's last show in Johannesburg, the venue, FNB Stadium, was reportedly robbed, with thieves making off with more than $300,000 from Bieber's show and a Bon Jovi concert the previous night, according to Sky News. "The suspect had gained entry through the roof," a local police spokeswoman says. "They broke the tile ... of the bathroom between [Sunday] night after the concert and this morning." The stolen money had been secured in a safe prior to the theft.

Zoe Saldana

Saldana swings both ways

Zoe Saldana is keeping an open mind when it comes to a potential family. How open, exactly? She tells Allure magazine that she might "end up with a woman raising my children. That's how androgynous I am." That's rather progressive. But Saldana says — rather cryptically — that it's all about not taking things for granted. "If I have something good in front of me, it doesn't matter if it's a person of a pair of shoes," she says. "I'm not going to test something else. It's insecure and it's immature."

Jolie reveals details on surgery to combat risk of breast cancer

Angelina Jolie has taken to the New York Times to reveal that she recently underwent a preventative double mastectomy to combat her genetic risk for breast cancer.

"I choose not to keep my story private because there are many women who do not know that they might be living under the shadow of cancer," she writes. "I can tell my children that they don't need to fear they will lose me to breast cancer. It is reassuring that they see nothing that makes them uncomfortable. They can see my small scars and that's it. Everything else is just Mommy, the same as she always was. And they know that I love them and will do anything to be with them as long as I can. On a personal note, I do not feel any less of a woman. I feel empowered that I made a strong choice that in no way diminishes my femininity."

Vin Diesel: Facebook owes me

THE WORD
Dorothy Robinson
scene@metronews.ca

Vin Diesel has a bone to pick with Facebook.

The Fast & Furious 6 star is taking credit for making celebrity pages popular on the social network, as he was one of the first movie stars to interact with his followers.

"Facebook used to ask me to come up to their office to explain what the f--- I was doing and why I had so many fans. What was unique was I never let anyone do a post. I never let anyone post for me in the last four years," he tells Entertainment Weekly. "Facebook really owes me billions of dollars, but whatever."

The secret? Diesel really interacts with his Facebook fans. And Diesel's fans (41,621,431 likes as of press time) return the favour. They are known for creating truly amazing Vin

Diesel Facebook art, many with "supposed" inspirational quotes by the actor super-imposed over photos of him. He calls these super-fanatical Diesel fans

"Vinangels, Vingypsies, and the various nomadic tribes of the Underverse."

In other news, Vin Diesel is a total weirdo. I love it.

Five strategies for solving your specific student conflict

SHAHEERAH

In our day-to-day lives, we are all faced with various conflicts that we must deal with.

In the context of the school environment, you might have a falling out with someone in your class project group, or perhaps even with your teacher. Whatever the conflict may be, it must be resolved as soon as possible in a mature and effective manner so that the problem does not escalate.

Depending on the situation you are in, the other parties involved and what their needs and wants are, as well as where each party stands on the power spectrum and the urgency of the situation, there are a number of different handy conflictresolution strategies that can be used to effectively mitigate and resolve the problem.

Read below to find out more about five common conflict resolution strategies that might be of use to you.

Competitive

This type of conflict-resolution strategy can be very useful if you are 100 per cent unyielding and unwilling to give in to the other party. But keep in mind that this strategy should only be used when you have a firm stand in the situation and you come from a position of power. Specifically, this strategy will be the most useful in times of emergency, where a decision regarding the most appropriate actions to be taken is required right away.

Collaborative

Collaborative conflict resolution comes in handy when you need to work together to meet the needs of all parties involved. In this type of conflict situation, a very high level of importance is placed on effective co-operation. Use this approach when you know you will be (or are likely to be) dealing with that party again.

Compromise

This type of conflict-resolution strategy should be used when you truly want to ensure that the solution will be satisfactory for all involved. In this scenario, each party involved must be willing to give in on some demands to come to the end solution.

Accommodate

This type of conflict-resolution strategy should be used when you are willing to meet the needs of others, but at your own cost. This strategy is not

The avoidance approach

This type of conflict-resolution strategy should be used when you simply want to avoid the conflict altogether.

- This is a good approach to use when you are just about at the end of your dealing with that party and will not have to deal with them again. Sometimes, the best thing to do is to simply keep your cool and avoid any problems altogether.

the overly-assertive type, but rather a more co-operative approach. Here, a very high level of importance is placed on achieving peace rather than winning.

When someone showcases inappropriate behaviour, especially in a workplace setting, it can create a negative work atmosphere in which other co-workers feel uninterested to do their work and even customers don't want to deal with that particular business. Whether the need for the confrontation arises in a work or personal setting, here are handy tips on how you should go about confronting that certain someone:

Be objective

Don't let your emotions get in the way — stay both morally and emotionally objective.

Stay focused on the issue

Always remain focused on the initial issue, and confront the person's behaviour.

Consistency

Try to be consistent in your approach and in what you do and say.

Laugh it up

It can be a very good idea to employ humour. This shows you are human and that you can make light of the situation. It's also a good way of cutting through the emotional tension.

NBA playoffs

Pacers one win away from conference final

George Hill scored 26 points and Paul George added 18 points and 14 rebounds Tuesday night, leading the Indiana Pacers to a 93-82 victory over the New York Knicks and a 3-1 lead in the second-round series.

Indiana needs one more win to reach the conference finals for the first time since 2004. Game 5 will be Thursday night at Madison Square Garden.

NBA scoring champ Carmelo Anthony fouled out with 24 points. J.R. Smith had 19 on another dreadful night for the Knicks.

The game followed a familiar pattern. New York's shooting was off, Indiana had a huge rebounding edge and the Knicks couldn't challenge in the second half.

Pats owner Russ Parker during the announcement that his son, Brent Parker, was stepping down as team GM.

Pats president and former GM Brent Parker was given a teary goodbye on Tuesday at the Brandt Centre where it was announced that he would be stepping down after 18 years with the WHL team.

"I am really at ease with my decision, but when you pour that much into something over 18 years — it gets emotional," Parker said. "I was very proud to be a part of this organization; it never felt like a job."

Chad Lang was consequently named senior VP, governor and general manager of the Pats, taking over many of Parker's former responsibilities.

Parker's father and Pats owner Russ Parker made the announcement with his son and Lang by his side.

"He (Brent) wanted so much for this franchise to be successful both on and off the ice," Russ Parker said. "I know he is disappointed ... but at the same time, I think going forward for him personally, this is the best thing to do."

Brent Parker said there was no single reason why he chose to leave the franchise but a combination of factors. Poor relations with Brandt Centre ownership, the pains of having a negative reputation among some in the community and the stress of the job were among the reasons Brent listed for leaving.

"The fun had left and it was time," said Brent who said that the departure of head coach Pat Conacher a week earlier did not factor into his decision.

Net gain: Smith makes case for Olympics

Mike Smith has gone from a goaltender no NHL team wanted to a candidate for Canada's next Olympic team.

WHL finals celebration. Portland uses season's adversity to fuel redemptive victory versus Edmonton Hit with unprecedented penalties by the Western Hockey League back in November, the Portland Winterhawks not only prevailed, they won the junior hockey league's championship.

"We could have used it as an excuse to wipe away the season," Dallas Stars prospect Taylor Peters said of the sanctions, which included the suspension of the team's head coach for the balance of the season. "But we used it as fuel."

The Winterhawks claimed the Ed Chynoweth Cup with a 5-1 Game 6 victory over the Edmonton Oil Kings on Sunday. Ty Rattie had a hat trick in the deciding win.

On Tuesday, thousands of fans came out as the city celebrated the title with a noon-time rally. Many supporters sported T-shirts reading "Portland Strikes Back."

The championship — and the cheers — were sweet revenge for the Winterhawks, who in November got hit with stiff penalties by the league for player-benefit violations. The WHL took away several draft picks and fined the team $200,000, in addition to suspending Winterhawks coach and general manager Mike Johnston for the rest of this season.

What the Winterhawks took issue with was the severity of the penalties, including Johnston's banishment.

Keeping his seat warm

"Just having him around and able to enjoy this with the rest of us is important."

Johnston wasn't allowed contact with the team during the season, but he was granted permission from the league to meet the Winterhawks on Sunday night when they landed in Portland after winning the championship.

The violations

The Winterhawks acknowledged some of the league's findings, which included:

- Over the last five years, seven families were provided flights two-to-four times per season based on financial need and their distance from Portland.
- Twice in the last five years the team paid for two players to each have a one-week summer training regimen.
- The Winterhawks provided a cellphone for their team captain for a period of three seasons.

Algae: The sublime green slim

Autopilot. It may cling to seaside rocks but it also eats carbon and makes a lot of bio fuel

AUTO PILOT
Mike Goetz
drive@metronews.ca

Mention algae today and one adjective invariably comes to mind: delicious.

But, seriously, down the road a bit, algae might be better known as a transportation bio-fuel, especially if Canada's National Research Council (NRC) has its way.

NRC recently teamed up with a few savvy industry partners to build a demonstration-scale "algal refinery" near Bonnyville, Alta., in the heart of oil-sands country.

People have long known about the bio-fuel potential of algae — it grows super fast, and it is comprised of a lot of natural oil (about 30 per cent by mass).

But this project is notable on two fronts: the way it is integrated into other industries and the size of its cultivation pot — 100,000 litres.

Give us your unwanted carbon

The project is officially known as the Algal Carbon Conversion Project. The pilot plant will be attached to another plant, part of the operations of Canadian Natural, an independent crude oil and natural gas producer. The plant has an impressive final emission stack. Like all plants, algae love carbon dioxide — it's what they breathe. So they love that emission stack. Previous efforts to com-mercialize bio-fuel from algae were evaluated on the bio-fuel alone, says Aleks Patrzykat.

"The idea here is to have an algal plant that will capture carbon dioxide from industrial emissions."

Big pots equal big volume

The algae will be grown in one of the biggest pots ever devoted to algae production. Patrzykat says the 100,000-litre cultivation vessel should be the same large size employed by future algae bio-fuel production plants. They would just have lots of them, instead of just the one. Such a vessel full of algae would net out about 10 per cent bio-fuel, or 10,000 litres. The rest of the biomass might be messy but still good, says Patrzykat, noting that depending on local circumstances, it could be used for cattle feed or fertilizer. For the record, Patrzykat is not sure how cattle feel about the taste of algae. Since it would be used more as a protein supplement for cattle feed, my guess is that the algae flavour would be subtle, like a herb. The more important point, says Patrzykat, is that the bio-mass be something that can be used by the local economy, so you don't spend a lot of energy moving it around. It's bulky stuff. Same for the carbon dioxide going into the system; CO₂ is expensive to store and transport.

Making a Dent

Usually when a new alternative fuel technology and/or fuel source comes along it's great news, but news always tempered with the reality that we use more than three trillion litres of petroleum products each and every day!

Canada uses about 81 million litres a day. Excuse me for stating the obvious, but that's a lot of petroleum. How do you replace those kinds of trillions and millions of litres? Maybe you start with bio-fuel made from algae feedstock. "Say in 50 years, we have a plant in each location, where it would be viable," says Patrzykat. "That would be enough plants to take care of 20 per cent of Canadian industrial emissions... It would also give you 6.2 billion litres of fuel. If it were jet fuel, that would be enough to fly WestJet and Air Canada for a year."
